About Henckels

HENCKELS

Henckels makes high quality kitchen tools at an exceptional value.

The Henckels brand was established in 1895 as a separate value brand of ZWILLING J.A. Henckels, one of the world's leading manufacturers of high quality cutlery, cookware, gadgets and flatware. This brand initiative allowed the quality standards, durability, design, and ease of use expected from ZWILLING products to be offered on a more affordable platform.

Henckels knives are fabricated from high quality stainless steel, boasting a single-piece construction that provides excellent durability. The full tang offers optimal balance while the ergonomic handles promote fatigue-free cutting. With technological expertise, we craft cutlery for the value conscious customer who wants high quality for the best price.

Henckels offers a range of everyday and specialty items that reflect the excellent engineering and design for which our cutlery is known. Our flatware features the beauty and functionality of superior 18/10 stainless steel. Our edge maintenance series includes sharpening steels and handheld sharpeners to easily ensure proper knife care. From scissors to spatulas, our kitchen tools ensure that home chefs have the right tool for each task.

All Henckels products are fully guaranteed against defects in materials and/or craftsmanship.

NOTES

Use and Care

HENCKELS

Cutlery

All Henckels knives are dishwasher-safe. However, we do not recommend putting knives in the dishwasher. Banging against other cutlery or pots and pans could chip the edge. High heat and detergent can discolor and damage the handle. Instead, wipe the knife clean in your sink with a wet cloth or soft sponge and dish soap. Dry immediately.

No metal is completely "stainless." Do not allow acidic foods (lemon, mustard, tomato, etc.) to remain on the blade after use. This may cause some slight tarnishing. Should the blade show signs of staining, use a nonabrasive metal polish for cleaning.

Do not cut through bone with knives (except meat cleavers). Do not use knives for poking, prying, separating or cutting semi-frozen or frozen foods.

Do not use knives as screwdrivers or can openers. This is not their designated purpose and may result in bending or breaking the blade or edge of the knife.

The Henckels warranty does not cover misuse.

Proper Knife Storage

Knives have to be stored in a safe place, protecting the cutting edge and guarding against injuries. These are some options for storing your knives:

A wooden knife block is the best way to store knives on the counter. The size of the block varies with the number of knives to be stored. Most Henckels blocks also have a slot for a honing steel and kitchen shears.

Knife sheaths not only protect the edge of the blade, but they also protect the sides from scratching. They can be used in combination with a knife roll for easy transportation.

Cutting Surfaces

Cutting surfaces should be smooth, easy to clean and "give" on contact with knife edge.

Henckels recommends wooden or bamboo cutting boards and quality polyethylene boards.

Avoid surfaces that can dull or damage the knife such as china, marble, granite, tile, Formica, porcelain, stainless counter tops and glass.

REMEMBER: All cutting boards and surfaces should be cleaned thoroughly immediately after use to avoid harmful bacteria growth.

Maintaining a Knife's Edge

Knives do not stay sharp forever. If you examine a knife under a microscope, you would see that the edge is made up of thousands of small cutting teeth. Through use, the fine teeth on the cutting edge will eventually become misaligned, resulting in a dull knife.

It is necessary to realign the teeth on a regular basis with a sharpening steel to renew the cutting edge; this is called honing.

Over time, a fine edge knife will have to be re-sharpened. This means the cutting edge can no longer be renewed by realigning and has to be reground to bring on a new edge.

Do not hone serrated knives with a sharpening steel. If a serrated knife becomes dull it should be sharpened by a professional or replaced.

Micro-serrated knives never need sharpening.

Flatware

Do not allow acidic foods such as mustard, ketchup, lemon etc., to remain in contact with the flatware after use. It is important to thoroughly rinse all flatware, dishes, containers etc. that have been in contact with these foods before placing in the dishwasher.

Avoid the use of detergents containing chlorides or a high lemon content. Do not allow the flatware to soak for extended periods of time especially in geographic areas with highly chlorinated or high iron content tap water. It is especially important to dry the flatware immediately after washing. Do not soak the flatware in aluminum containers or with aluminum utensils or tools.

In the dishwasher, a drying cycle is recommended. Wet flatware should not be allowed to sit for extended periods of time. Make sure all metal utensils, tools, containers etc., placed in the dishwasher are free of spots or corrosion. Spotting or surface rusting can be caused by any of the above, but can be easily removed with a mild non-abrasive metal polish recommended for stainless steel.
